HULL REACHES CHIEF GOAL IN TRADE PACTS

U. S. Signs Treaties Today With Biggest Customers, England And Canada

SOME DISAPPOINTMENTS

But Agreement Is Seen As Long Step Toward Freer World Commerce

By Leo C. Wilson
WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The United States today formally signed trade agreements with its two greatest customers, England and Canada. The United Kingdom and Canada have signed similar agreements with the United States.

But the British Embassy, British consuls and the United States consuls in London and Ottawa are expected to sign similar agreements with the United States.

Through the signing of these agreements, the United States will have all its major trade agreements with the world's two greatest customers.

The agreements will give the United States a market of 100 million people.

Some Disappointments
Despite the agreement, the United States will not have all its major trade agreements with the world's two greatest customers.
