Marriage Bureau Uncovered Providing Haven For German Refugees

By United Press.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The Daily Express said today that Scotland Yard had uncovered a marriage bureau specializing in providing British nationality for wealthy German women refugees.

The Express asserted that agents of the bureau had been approaching laborers, lorry drivers and unemployed men with offers of $300 and expenses, including a new suit, if they would marry German Jewish women.

The agents stipulated that the bridegroom must sign a pledge not to approach the bride after the ceremony.

As proof the newspaper cited the trial of William Fordham, 54, who was sentenced to four months' imprisonment for bigamously marrying a German Jew.

The prosecutor said it was clear that the ceremony was a marriage of convenience. Fordham was legally married in 1913 and had eight children. He left his wife in 1932.

When arrested he said:

"I've not done anything wrong. I got 35 sterling ($175) for marrying her and a new suit."
