BERLIN, Nov. 18—Germany completed a "psychological suggestion" of relations with the United States today by ordering the Nazi ambassador to return to Berlin and explain President Roosevelt's "extraneous attitude" toward recent events in the Reich.

Ambassador Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff was ordered to return to Berlin less than 24 hours after United States Ambassador Hugh Wilson left Germany for Washington, having been summoned by Sec-tary of State Cordell Hull at the behest of President Roosevelt for "urgent” negotiations.

The German Nachrichten-bureau, official news agency, said:

"The ambassador will thoroughly inform the forgie minister regarding feeling in the United States and the extraneous attitude of the various activities by President Roosevelt and other leading persons in the United States,”

DIECKHOFF At a press conference in Washington Tuesday President Roosevelt vigorously denounced Germany's anti-Semitic campaign.

The departure of Dieckhoff and the recall to Washington of U.S.
Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson will in no way represent a formal break in relations between the two governments. Yet it was a diplomatic way of making clear that friendship between them is severely strained.

The withdrawal of the American and German ambassadors to “make reports” was unusual for severa reasons:

1. The strain came just as Europe’s democratic powers were seeking to improve relations and, in particular, to reach an accord with Germany.

2. It emphasized the American policy of condemning governments (See Jews, Page 10)
